TRUE LOVE NEVER DIES

What good is a great love that lasts a few days? What good is an unattainable hope? Christ has risen and with his resurrection we can affirm that true love does not die, that it is worth loving, that God's love is eternal.

True love cannot die. God is love, He shows us the fullness of his love in Christ. Christ died and rose again because he loves us and Christ continues to love us, that is why He will never stop calling us into his presence.

True love cannot die. I will never resign myself to believing that true love dies. The true love that sacrifices and dies to itself for the beloved cannot die.

On one occasion I asked a lady who had a son in jail for having committed horrendous crimes: “Do you still love your son?” She replied: “Yes, Father, although my heart hurts to see what he did and to see him in those conditions, I still love him.” If this is the love of a mother, what will the love of God be like? True love does not die.

If love could die, then our efforts would be in vain; and everything we do would be meaningless and our life would be absurd. But true love cannot die. Christ has overcome sin and death with his passion and His death. With His love He has brought us hope and the certainty that it is worth loving. Although sometimes you feel the weight of the cross, difficulties, illnesses and pain, remember that it is always worth loving.

Christ has risen and we will rise with Him. The love of Christ has won and we, if we love and are faithful to God, will win with Christ.
